WAR WILL PREVENT NATIONAL MATCHES

Janesville Boy Who Entered Boxing Game Making Good Over in Australia.

(By Striker.)

The power-wow over in Europe will put a decided crimp into athletic activities of an international nature for some time to come, as war time notice for successful international matches. It would be awful to ponder what would happen if a German and French team came into contact in even a chess game, let alone a boxing bout. What would happen if it was a football game?

Sir Thomas Lipton has decided he will not attempt to lift the yacht cup, which he had intended to do, to keep the German dreadnaughts of the North Sea and the Davis cup international matches are at a standstill because some one untied the dog of war and as a certain famous scribe said, "the same dog of war increased the canine population over in Europe and chased the dove of peace to tail numbers. The Olympic games, to have taken place in Berlin, will probably be scheduled at what cups and trophies the United States has in their cupboards now is safe until the powers settle their own little arguments.

In the squared arena war has failed to dampen the order of the fans and the arena is booming merrily. It is often said that a person to be appreciated should leave his "home town." This truth is evident when one considers how a few of the American pugilists who over here were lucky to get three mounds a day, now are rolling in wealth and fame over in Australia. Jimmy Clabby, American middleweight, certainly put another notch in his claim to the champion ship when he knocked over the over on the person of Dave Smith in the first round of their match Saturday at Sydney, Australia. Clabby kicked Eddie McGeohy for the third time recently and has just claims to the throne of the middleweights.

Harry Stone, who three years ago was having a hard time keeping his back bone from hitting his stomach, from lack of food, now lays claim to the welterweight honors after having fought his way to the front over in the Antipodes. In New York, Stone's home town, he was lucky to get on in an "opener" but now this same Stone is considered a fortune hunter to meet Carpentier, the French "fox" champion. Carpentier has called off a pending match, declaring in patriotic words "that his country was first."

Ranking of successful boxers over in Australia, there is Young Shugrue, who is a Janesville boy, having lived here for the greater part of his life before going to Chicago to learn the game in the training camps, is now listed as a coming champion over in the Kangaroo land—having knocked out the two champs down in the promised land of fighters, namely Australia. Even fans in this city failed to remember Shugrue except that a here was willing to ride the bumper to Chicago to obtain a preliminary match. Joe Welling, of the U. S. A. had to leave home to be appreciated and the Chicago boy is now a star in the Antipodes, while in Chicago he was regarded as a good boxing bag for the leading lightweights to harden their mitts on. And there are many others down in Australia who are getting away with the reputation and money the same way. Any way, Janesville fans wish Young Shugrue the best of luck for those who remember him, remark of his clean and gentlemanly habits.

And Morris, the Oklahoma giant, who is the original white hope, who stepped off his engine and went out to take the crown of boxing's head when "Black Jack" and Morris feel his first slumber, but punch at Reno, will invade Europe. Morris hopes to make a "feet of lead" the pond as his campaign here was disastrous. Maybe he will learn to fight over there if they don't let him in the army.

White is keeping busy these days training for his match match with Joe Arzvedo, August 17th at Reno. Willie Ritchie now comes out with the statement that White could not win the belt. Ritchie says that he has seen him in London. White knocked him in Milwaukee, which shows that Ritchie is honest.

Johnny Thompson, the St. Louis boxer, is the latest to back track. He is to meet John J. Barry. Although the Cyclone has a good many acres of good Illinois land and a nice snug sum in the bank, and a good reputation in the boxing game, Thompson will take another whirl at the ring, and for once and for all. In his last fight, Thompson was feared for his class and he carried a punch behind a powerful at-

Rivers and Leach Cross are to box twenty rounds at Verona, and western fans are watching the outcome of the bout with interest. Word is it is claimed has been received from Freddie Welsh that he is willing to come to America to box White. Thanksgiving day if a pound of money is offered. Johnny Pease is now at Los Angeles looking for matches.

Arthur Pelkey announces that he will retire from the ring on the basis that he has never recovered his nerve following the tragic victory over Luther McCarthy. Pelkey also

It has often been noticed about the Giant clubhouse and while the team is on the road that Jim Thorpe, the well-known Indian, shows Red Murray, the New York outfielder, very little courtesy. Thorpe is always courteous with Murray, but he cannot chum with him or feel very friendly toward him. Nor could he turn up to Leon Ames when the latter was with the Giants. And the reason is interesting. Both Ames and Murray have red hair. There has been a feud, or something akin to it, for a number of years between the Sac and Fox tribes of Indians and all red-headed people. President Jackson, who it may be remembered, deprived the Sac Indians of their homes and all but exterminated them, was a red-headed. Since that time the papposes have been taught to hate red-headed people. Of course, Thorpe says, now that they are mostly civilized, they realize the folly of such a thing, but the dislike for red heads has become so instinctive that they cannot thoroughly overcome it.

Bill Brennan, well-known umpire, says that he considers umpires better able to handle angry crowds than policemen. Bill says this is true because umpires can size men or crowds up at a glance. "When I started out in this game," says Brennan, "I had two rules, and I've stuck to them ever since. One is always to keep my eye on the ball and the other is to study the nature of each player. After working at this for many years we get so we can see through a man at once. All of which sounds fine, but there is still some doubt as to whether such an enviable attainment would be of great help in the face of a peevish crowd."

Manager Jimmy Callahan of the White Sox is quoted by the New York Evening Sun as saying: "The Chifeds are lost in the present shuffle in Chicago. The White Sox have outdrawn them all season and now the Cubs have begun to win back the fans in droves. With the White Sox and Cubs both pennant contenders the Chicago public is forgetting the Chifeds, even though they are in front, for the reason that to win the Federal league pennant is an empty honor. Chicago wants to take part in the world's series."

THE GOOD JUDGE FEARS THE WOODMAN'S LIFE

MAN, you are not alone in your desire for a clean, small chew that will give you tobacco satisfaction! That's why men are glad to find "Right-Cut." Then when they've got it, the natural thing to do is to tell a friend—so he can get the Real Tobacco Chew. Pure, rich tobacco—seasoned and sweetened just enough.

Take a very small chew—less than one-quarter the old size. It will be more satisfying than a mouthful of ordinary tobacco. Just nibble on it until you find the strength chew that suits you. Tuck it away. Then let it rest. See how easily and evenly the real tobacco taste comes, how it satisfies without grinding, how much less you have to spit, how few chews you take to be tobacco satisfied. That's why it is The Real Tobacco Chew. That's why it costs less in the end.

It is a ready chew, cut fine and short shred so that you won't have to grind on it with your teeth. Grinding on ordinary candied tobacco makes you spit too much. The taste of pure, rich tobacco does not need to be covered up with molasses and licorice. Notice how the salt brings out the rich tobacco taste in "Right-Cut."

If your dealer does not sell it, send us 10c. in stamps for a pouch of "Right-Cut" Chewing Tobacco.

But his solitary habits have always aroused wonder, and not so long ago a New York sport writer who has long traveled with the team was asked where McGraw kept himself and what he did while not on the ball field. "You can search me," said this veteran New York scribe.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

ON OVERHAULING ONE'S SELF.

It has been said that the world takes a man at his own valuation. The obvious moral is, take on all the valuation you think you can get away with. That the world will sometimes take you at your own valuation is quite true. But it is equally true that over-valuation may prove a boomerang.

To pretend that we are accustomed to every luxury is to increase our value in the eyes of our acquaintances, if we can make them believe it to be true. At the same time it often has another effect.

"I should like to have had Mrs. S. stay a few days with us this summer at the beach," I overheard a friend of mine say the other day. "She has a very nice home, I know, and she is quite splendid in refusing to desert her husband during the hot months, nevertheless I should think she would like a change. But she has everything in her own home and we are quite primitive here, so I'm afraid she wouldn't be satisfied."

Now as a matter of fact, Mrs. S. is at home retreating this summer because her husband's business has fallen off. She would have welcomed ever so gladly a chance to get away to the seashore, and she would have enjoyed every minute of it. For though she likes to pretend differently, she hasn't so much more than her neighbors have.

To pretend that we are so important in business that the firm we are connected with pays us a big salary is also apt to increase our value in the eyes of our acquaintances if we can make them believe it to be true. Again this over-valuation may prove as much of a boomerang as it is of assistance.

I know a young man who adds a good position but who is very much underpaid. Pride forbids him from telling this fact be known, instead he boasts of the salary he says he is getting. In the last year another concern was looking for an office manager at a salary he would have jumped at. His name came up.

"It's just the man we want," said the vice-president, "but T. & Co. is paying him a bigger salary than we could possibly offer. You couldn't touch him with a ten-foot pole." So somebody else got the job.

In both these instances a successful attempt was made to increase one's valuation in the eyes of the others. And in both instances the deception proved a boomerang.

So the moral is not quite so obvious after all.

Heart and Home Problems

BY MISS ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) Will you please tell me something for curing blackheads?

(2) Will the sun tan the skin when going out bare-headed about 4 o'clock in the evening?

(3) I have a friend that has blue eyes, light hair and fair complexion. Five feet six inches tall. Do you consider him good looking?

(4) I am five feet five inches tall, dark brown hair and eyes, and light complexion. Do you consider me good looking?

A READER.

(1) If it is a bad case of blackheads, wash the face with hot water and soap, at night, then put on a paste made of cold cream and powdered sulphur. Leave this on all night. In the morning wash again with hot water and a mild soap, rinse with clean cold water and then, if any of the blackheads appear soft enough, gently squeeze them out. Don't bruise the skin when doing this. After squeezing out, anoint with a little peroxide or alcohol. You must keep this up daily, for only persistence will rid you of blackheads. Watch your diet. Eat no rich or greasy foods and keep your digestion good. Drink a great deal of pure water and keep the bowels open.

(2) The sun will tan any time when it is shining.

(3) and (4) I cannot tell whether you are handsome or not by this description. I should judge that you are both good to look at, if you keep clean, have good thoughts and live your life for the welfare of others.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am fifteen years old and a freshman in high school.

(1) What is a good cure for warts? I have tried most everything.

(2) About a year ago I traded rings with a boy friend. He did not return mine as I did his soon after. How can I get my ring back, as I never see him to speak to him?

(3) I have many hours of sleep should girls and boys of my age have?

(4) Is it proper for me to have quite a lot of boy friends?

(5) Why is it some of them won't even look at you if you go anywhere with someone else?

"QUEENIE."

(1) I have heard that if you will put kerosene on the wart every day it will dry up so you can pick it off. Another says to use sulphur.

120 grains sublimated sulphur, 5 fluid drams glycerine, 1 fluid dram acetic acid.

You can have this mixed at the drug store. Apply it often to each wart for several days. The warts will dry up and drop off.

(2) Write to him that you want it. Or speak to him next time you see him and ask him if he has forgotten that he has not returned your ring.

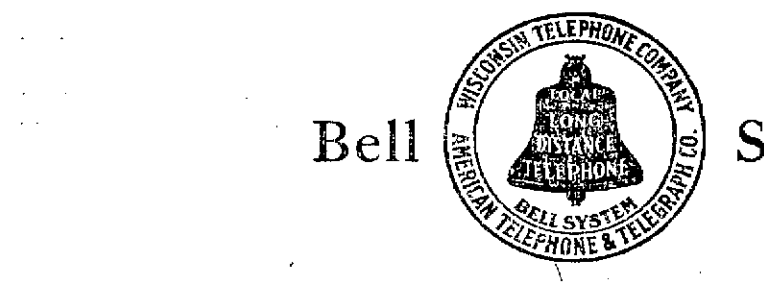

(3) Ten hours is not too much.

(4) Boy friends do no harm if you do not allow them to act silly with you.

(5) I'm afraid, my dear, they are not very good-mannered if they do that. Perhaps they feel slighted.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: There is a girl in town that tries to go with the boy I am in love with. He goes with her once in a while and pretends to be true to me. How can I make him think more of me, so he will be true to me and not go with her?

If your young man is worth loving he is worth trusting. Give him the right to be nice to other girls as well.

There is Much Prose in Life, Along With the Poetry.

Mr. ROLAND DELAND, the poetic counter in the approved fashion, though poorly tenor of the choir, is a fortunate young man. His melodious tones have won for him the esteem and honor of being Peggy's latest crush.

When he was present with the rest of family on the occasion of Peggy's debut, expressed conviction that a glass of warm water before retiring would enhance the symmetry of Mr. Deland's figure. He said also that he realized Roland was not a tenor through any choice of his own. Still, Tom said, there is no excuse for it, because he had heard that it would be cured.

Erands have taken Peggy downtown today and she is in no mood for such a prosy business. She would much rather stay home and go over her part in another duet at the piano, or perhaps read the pretty little blue volume of poems Mr. Deland has given her. Mr. Deland's society, in fact, has alienated Peggy from all the cold, unromantic affairs of the material world. She prefers to live only in the world of her own dreams. And with the ear of fancy forever lost to each cadence of Roland's entrancing voice.

"A bottle of catsup and—" Peggy reads the items over as she enters Earstow's big grocery store. It used to be that she enjoyed shopping here, but today it irks her. She will be glad to be through and away.

"Miss Gray!" was there something? comes to her in a voice strangely familiar and she turns to see Roland Deland in the white apron of a grocer's clerk, leaning over with an eager smile, his arms spread out and with fingers tapering to the point.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

To prevent hot fruit cracking a glass jar, place the jar upon a wet cloth before pouring the fruit into it. If ink is spilled on the carpet, immediately cover the spot with salt. Do not rub it, but let it dry, then brush it with a stiff brush.

A teaspoonful of salt dissolved in a pint of grain alcohol is a good mixture for cleaning sticky spots from carpets.

One pint of milk or water equals one pound. Two cups of granulated sugar equals one pound.

THE TABLE.

Charlotte Russe—Cut a stale sponge cake into slices and line a glass bowl with them. Into a pint of chilled cream stir a half cupful of powdered sugar and a pinch of salt. At the last beat in two teaspoonfuls of extract of vanilla. Fill the bowl with whipped cream and set in the ice chest until wanted.

Chocolate Sauce—chocolate sauce for vanilla ice cream is especially liked by young people. To make this, pour a cup and a half of boiling water over an ounce of chocolate shavings, and when the latter is melted add one cupful of sugar and a pinch of salt and boil five minutes. Now add one-half of a teaspoonful of gelatin that has been softened in enough water to cover it and stir until it is dissolved. Strain the sauce through a piece of cheesecloth and add one teaspoonful of vanilla.

Bavarian Cream—Two tablespoonfuls of gelatin, one-half cup of cold water, one can of grated pineapple, one-half cup of sugar, one tablespoonful of lemon juice, three cups of whipped cream (three cups should make about six cups when it is whipped, if it is good and heavy cream). Soak the gelatin in cold water. Heat the pineapple. Add the sugar and stir until dissolved. Add the lemon juice and soaked gelatin. Stir in the gelatin thoroughly to make sure it is all dissolved. Then chill—set in a pan of ice water. When it begins to thicken fold in about one cupful of the whipped cream. Set in ice, and when that has set a little stir in another one-quarter and so on until all the cream is used. Put in bread tins and set overnight in ice box.

Onion Sauce—Cut and finely chop one Bermuda onion and cook three minutes with two tablespoonfuls of butter, stirring constantly. Add two and one-half tablespoonfuls of flour and stir until well blended, then pour on gradually, while stirring constantly, one cup of milk. Bring to the boiling point and let simmer three minutes; then add one egg yolk, slightly beaten and diluted with two tablespoonfuls of milk.

Spaghetti (Neapolitan style)—One pound spaghetti boiled (without breaking) 20 minutes in boiling water. Put in colander, throw cold water on it, drain and warm again. Sauce: Bacon cut in small pieces and fried; in bacon grease brown some onions, cut small; add seasoning, green pepper and one can tomatoes or one can "tomato sauce with basil," one can mushrooms or fried fresh mushrooms. Put spaghetti on hot platter and pour sauce over it. In a separate dish have grated Roman (Italian) cheese or Parmesan cheese to smear over it. The steam from boiling water will moisten spaghetti, so it can be wound around in kettles without breaking. The spaghetti, "tomato sauce with basil," and Roman cheese can be obtained at Italian fruit stores or from Italian hucksters. The mushrooms may be omitted from the same.

Every Day Talks To Every Day People

(BY FRANCES JOYCE KENNEDY.)

When our thought receptacle becomes a vacuum (as it's small this often happens), we turn to the letters that come in for the woman's page. In them one can always find human interest. If we were allowed to put them in as they come into the office it is safe to say that someone would be forced to purchase a ticket for the island of Somewhere—or remaining, face a verbal cannon's mouth.

"My husband is mean and stingy. He will never give me a cent to run the house unless we have a regular row," writes a woman who is the mother of seven children. The man in question holds down a steady job, is not what you would call a drinking man, and is, to all outward appearances, a splendid fellow.

The person who will calmly march into a home and try to restore law and order when chaotic conditions exist between husband and wife and who calmly walk out again, is the individual who many declare is a myth. If one cannot run their own life's boat successfully, can they expect a disinterested party to right it for them?

The woman who wrote this letter has seven children, the oldest must be fifteen or sixteen. She says the two oldest are girls. If she is in the habit of doing, but if her children are trained to work she is in a safe way to make the hill if she only applies herself to the task in hand. If she read up a bit on "how to make money at home," she would find many ways and means right under her hand to improve her financial condition. All around us, very near, are opportunities waiting for us to use them. We look too far without ever entering the ranks as a private.

There never was a time when the field for women was so prolific, when chances for success were better. Where many of us make our mistakes is in forgetting that it is the small homely tasks that really count. Every one is looking for work that is "gentle," that will give them "ease." Most women have enough work to do at home to keep them going all day, every day, if they will do it and doing it as it should be done, will cut down the high cost of living in an appreciable way. If one wants to earn without leaving their own home, why not do home baking for the stores or for private families? Canned fruits and jellies are things that are always in demand and if you think you can make money on this, line of business—just sit down and figure it out yourself—you can.

We do not aim to infer that it is right for any man to make a home call children into existence and then not do his level best to maintain it. But, sometimes a man's mismanagement at home it took a woman is not a judicious spender. A man is in a hole, the depth of which is not easy to ascertain. Look twice at the money you spend and work so hard for, before you spend it.

Where It Has the Advantage.

"The pen is mightier than sword," said the ready-made philosopher. "I don't quite see how the sword applies to current conditions," commented the man with a practical mind. "It probably refers to the fact of the sword as now worn is entirely harmless, while a fountain pen can explode in a way that will ruin a $30.00 of clothes in five seconds."—Washington Star.

GOOD RESULTS BEING OBTAINED IN CONTEST

INSPECTION OF CROPS SHOWS EXCELLENT PROGRESS OF BOYS' FIELDS.

CORN IN FINE SHAPE

Professor Gives Timely Advice On Caring for Corn Fields in Commercial Club Contest.

On last Friday, July 31, the undersigned, in company with H. M. Craig, representative of the Janesville Commercial Club, and L. A. Markham, representative of the Rock County Corn Contest, visited thirteen of the boys who have entered the contest and inspected their crops.

The crops are in fine shape, and the boys are doing well. The corn is in fine shape, and the boys are doing well. The corn is in fine shape, and the boys are doing well.

Some fields were beginning to show the effects of dry weather, and as this is the season of the year when the boys are growing corn, it is important to conserve the moisture in the ground from the abundant rainfall of the early months. Now that the corn is in fine shape, it is important to conserve the moisture in the ground from the abundant rainfall of the early months.

to have perfectly clean areas, if they put the necessary amount of time into it.

This story is told of an old man in Rock county who has a large vegetable garden and raises considerable small fruit. A neighbor passing through the garden discovered a weed and hastening to the owner's house knocked on the door and informed the man that he had discovered a weed in his garden. The man said: "I was sure you didn't know it or it wouldn't be there." The old gentleman is now 85 years of age and has a place of about four acres upon which he says not a weed has gone to seed in the twenty years he has owned the place.

Surely boys working for a prize upon an acre of ground ought to keep up with the old man of more than four score years.

On one farm visited the corn that first appeared to view was so small and so yellow that the visitors felt that the boy on that farm would be quite discouraged, but when they found him and inquired how his corn was growing they found him quite cheerful as he showed the way to a field they had not seen where the corn was growing most thickly and was of the dark green color indicative of vigor. The contrast between the two fields on the same farm was very marked. In that the contest was on sod ground and gave promise of an excellent crop. If we may judge from the boys visited Friday there, a greater number of boys making good in this contest than is usual in such contests. We hope the other sections of the county may produce as good a showing and that the boys will all round up in the free trip to Madison, which is to be given them by the Janesville Commercial Club after their work is done.

DR. NUZUM WRITES OF BEAUTIFUL PARIS

Janesville Physician Enjoys Splendor of French City—Dr. Woods Remains in London.

Gazette, Janesville, Wis., July 22.

I have just returned from Paris where I spent some days sight-seeing. Dr. Woods remained in London, as he had visited Paris on two occasions previously. Paris is a beautiful and fertile country for the most part, but the farm houses are old, small and many of them built with the stable so that the people occupy one end and the stock the other. They put their grass with the sythe and grain with the cradle. They use large two-wheeled carts, and in some instances oxen are still used. Many sheep are raised and sheep and dogs herd each other. The fields are rolling, they are terraced so one field is higher than another and so on up the grade. The crops look well in most places, but the fields are small. On the whole the farming class is far behind our farmers, and does his business on a far smaller scale. Their wives are usually working in the house with the children and in some instances without the children.

Paris is a most beautiful city—dare say the most beautiful capital in Europe, if not in the world. Since the German occupation in the 70's, it has been a beautiful city. The buildings are quite uniform, from four to six stories high and the statuary that one sees on many of them and on the public squares and in the parks is beautiful and imposing. In these are many beautiful fountains, flowers, shrubbery and trees.

The royal palaces are now used as museums, galleries and places to be visited by tourists from which they receive a splendid revenue as tourists flock into these European cities by the thousands and leave a stream of gold. It is claimed that London has an average of nearly 1,000,000 tourists and I think Paris is not far behind.

The people are light-hearted and gay, drink beer and wine freely and gamble for a pass time. Women and children are free to go to the casinos, which are quite as freely as men. Sunday is one big holiday—everything with the exception of the big firms, run wide open and the day is given up to sports, games and general merry-making.

Last Sunday the International Prix for Aviation races took place and about thirty balloons were sent up from Aviation Park. One met with an accident, causing the two occupants to fall to the ground, each being injured, one seriously.

Two aeroplanes were sent up and there was a swimming match in which some twenty odd boys and young children swam. The prizes at games of chance were quite as freely as men. Sunday is one big holiday—everything with the exception of the big firms, run wide open and the day is given up to sports, games and general merry-making.

The street was so full of people that one could scarcely get along it, and when we became weary we returned to our hotel. The contrast between that and the quiet Sunday in London is very marked.

Well, Dr. Woods and I are busy ourselves visiting the clinics in the many great hospitals of this city where we see some of the world's greatest surgeons.

The Congress of the Surgeons of North America begins on the 27th inst. and we will sail for home on August 8, and hope to arrive in Janesville about the 18th or 20th. Dr. Woods joins me in kind regards to the Gazette staff as well as all friends in Rock and Green counties.

Sincerely,
T. W. NUZUM.

Doctor Speaks Out to Coffee Drinkers

The Boston Advertiser of June 15, 1914, quotes Dr. D. H. Kress, of Chicago, in an address as saying that tea, coffee and cocoa cause more deaths than alcohol.

"These table beverages are sapping the life of our nation. They are making us a race of weak-kneed, weak-livered beings, unable to reproduce ourselves. The kidneys and liver do not perform their proper functions, and the waste matter left in the system tends to bring on arteriosclerosis.

"Statistics show conclusively that as the consumption of coffee, tea and cocoa have increased, the number of nervous diseases and insanity have increased, proportionately."

This strong statement from a medical authority, cannot be lightly disregarded.

It is easy to prove in one's own case whether coffee is the cause of frequent "spells" of nervousness, indigestion, biliousness, liver complaint, headache, heart disturbance and other ills.

Quit coffee 10 days, and in its place use

ALONE IN THE WILDERNESS

By JOSEPH KNOWLES

Copyright, 1913, by Small, Maynard & Co.

On the strength of this I applied again to the commissioners about ten days later, laying stress on that section of the law and also mentioning the fact that noted men were endorsing the experiment. Not until Aug. 4, the day I entered the forest, was a decision reached. I did not see the letter announcing it until I arrived at Megantic after my experiment was over.

"Your request for permission to kill animals and birds in Maine in close season," reads this letter, "was considered by this commission at a meeting today.

"While we appreciate the inconvenience that you may be put to, nevertheless in view of the fact that your experiences will undoubtedly be published if the desired permit was granted it would certainly put our board in the position of endorsing violations of our inland fish and game laws, which we cannot see our way clear to do."

No name was signed to that letter, only the word "Chairman" appearing where the name of the writer customarily appears.

However, with the knowledge that I had been refused once, as explained in a previous column, I went into the woods and tried to live within the game laws. This made my task doubly hard. Everybody but the commissioners of my own state was with me. The manner in which they had acted before I entered the forest naturally made me feel that they would not hesitate to disturb me after I had broken the law. I couldn't be disturbed, as that would have spoiled everything.

CHAPTER XVII.

Red Tape.

AMONG others who met me after I reached Canada were four state of Maine game wardens, and they were all five men. They assured me that I would have a free passport through the state. They got in touch with the commissioners at Augusta, who through them invited me to the Natural History hall in the capitol, where a reception was to be held in my honor.

The people of Augusta accorded me a tremendous reception—one that I shall never forget—and when our party arrived at the statehouse hundreds of people had gathered for the affair.

First of all I called on the fish and game commission in the office of the chairman. Scarcely had the doors closed when a cold blooded transaction followed. The chairman summoned one of his clerks, who read off the various fines attached to the killing of game out of season. Then I was asked what I had killed. I gave this information, and the chairman took down the various things that I mentioned. Then turning to me he said, "It will cost you $205, Mr. Knowles."

Members of my party stepped up and assured the commissioners that the fines would be attended to just as soon as the party arrived in Boston, and I was escorted into the Natural History hall, where the people were waiting to receive me. As I was moving on schedule the time was very limited, and presently I left the hall in the waiting automobile in order to keep an appointment with the mayor and make train connections for Portland.

As I started through a lane of people through the street one of the commissioners dashed down the steps and announced that the chairman had decided that I must give bonds before I left the statehouse.

"But that matter will be attended to just as soon as we arrive in Boston," protested the man who was engineering the party. "We are on schedule, and every minute is precious."

In spite of this the commissioners insisted, so I went back to the office where the attorney general was waiting with the chairman.

"But they are on schedule, Mr. Commissioner, and they haven't got time," said the attorney general.

"We'll make time," declared the chairman, with every ounce of authority that his office allows.

However, to make a long story short, a spirited conference followed, and I was allowed to depart to catch my train after I had affixed my signature to the document that gave me free passport through Maine. This also contained a clause to the effect that I would pay all fines for what game I had killed.

Afterward two of the commissioners, for whom I have the highest regard, came to me and said they were sorry that such a thing had happened. They told me they had been in favor of granting me a permit in the first place, but that they had had to give in to the chairman of the board.

Such, through the admission of the majority of the board of fish and game commissioners, is the condition of the state of Maine today. The majority of the board is controlled by the minority.

I suffered more mentally during my last ten days in the forest than at any other time. This suffering was not due to the fact that I wanted to go out before my time was up, but rather because of a fear that I might be molested by game wardens before I had lived my two full months in the forest.

After I had killed my bear I wondered at various times just how the game wardens and the fish and game commissioners would act. However, after I had got my deer the thought was harder to get rid of than it had been before. I was not conscience stricken or anything like that. I had only killed game through sheer necessity. The one paramount thought in my mind after getting my deer was that the game wardens would come into the woods and take me out. Being alone and having no one to talk the matter over with, I turned this thing over and over in my mind. I imagined all kinds of things. I felt as if I were being hunted. The thought got hold of me so that I began to neglect myself. I camped anywhere and everywhere. I said to myself, "What is the use of building a house only to have the game wardens come along and find me as soon as it is finished?"

During those ten days I lived in a state so that I could move any minute. I wandered from place to place, always watching for men who might be after me, and I saw some men during those days, but they did not see me. In all I saw four or five. Every strange sound I heard startled me. I would think, "There they are again," and I would go back to my lean-to to see if they had been there.

The idea that I was hunted brought out all the animal in me. I acted just as a deer would act. At night I slept in such a way that I could not be surprised from the rear. In a word, just as the deer does, I faced my back tracks. If any one had approached me I would have seen him before he could have seen me.

One afternoon a party of three men passed within ten feet of where I was hiding. They were talking about me. Can the reader imagine how I would have felt, after having lived two months in the woods as I had lived, to have come forth from the forest to meet my friends and have half a dozen game wardens step up and place me under arrest and take my skins away from me? I said to myself, "I will beat these wardens at their own game if possible."

In the wilderness I had no one to ask advice of. I had to settle everything for myself. So I began to reason that if I went to Canada the wardens would not molest me in any way. I felt revengeful. I didn't care what the Canadian officials did to me as long as I escaped the Maine authorities. I would have undergone anything rather than be taken by game wardens in the woods.

After my decision to go to Canada I knew I must notify my friends of my intention. The night I started for Canada I was a little dubious as to the exact date of the month it might be. A week before I had lost my calendar stick and was carrying the days in my head. I knew I wasn't ahead of time, but was not sure about being one day late.

Placing on a stump a roll of birch bark on which I had written that I would meet my friends on the shore of Lake Megantic, Canada, on Oct. 4, I went back into the woods. Following a trail to the left to a point about a mile and a half from the camp, I then swung in, walking straight in through the camp yard. There was a light in one of the cabins, and as I passed I could hear the boys playing cards. Over at one side I saw two men going up one of the trails with a lantern, but they did not see me. I continued on my way down to the Spencer stream, which I forded, and then went on a few miles until I had crossed the Kibby stream.

Then I headed up Spotted Spruce mountain, where I spent the night. I didn't have any fire or lean-to. I simply curled up in my bearskin at the foot of a tree and slept as best I could. It had begun to rain hard. My mind was filled with wardens, and I didn't stop for anything to eat that night. I remember that I dreamed for the first time. I thought that I was talking to some one and in my dream I would say to myself, "I have gone and talked with some one, and now it is all off." Then I would wake up and be mighty glad it was not true.

From Spotted Spruce I drifted along down on the slope of Old Snow mountain, over Hurricane mountain, where half a mile beyond I came to Douglas pond. Boundary mountain was straight ahead, and I made for it. It was not until I had crossed the line that I drew my first free breath. They couldn't touch me now!

The rain hadn't abated in the slightest, and again I tried to sleep with my back against a tree. It was impossible to go on, as I could not see my hand before my face. I had eaten once that day—early in the morning—when I had shot a partridge with my bow and arrow. Not being able to get a fire in the wet, I had eaten it raw. I ate nothing that night.

The next day was the 4th of October. I was not sure of this, believing it might be Sunday, the 5th.

I still had some distance to travel, and after going on for two or three hours I heard the distant whistle of a train away off somewhere ahead. I followed the direction of the sound, and about 4 o'clock that afternoon I saw before me through the trees the tracks of the Canadian Pacific railroad.

A tramcar with three men aboard rolled up the track. As I came out into the open and saw them I rushed back in among the trees so that they wouldn't see me. Then I laughed to myself when I thought what I had done. I had simply jumped back out of habit. My time was up in the forest, and I did not need to fear human beings any more.

Some distance back in the woods I had donned my skins, not knowing exactly whom I might meet.

When the train had passed I came out of the woods and made my way to the railroad tracks. There was no one in sight now. I started along up the track, wondering how the people would receive me.

Suddenly ahead of me up the track I saw a little girl about fourteen years old. She caught sight of me and stopped stock still. In spite of what she saw she held her ground and watched me approach. I wouldn't have blamed her if she had run back just then because I must have been an unusual picture in my skins.

Coming closer, I asked her how far it was to Megantic. A torrent of French greeted me. I knew a little of the language and put the question again. She told me Megantic was about seven miles farther along. I tell you, the sound of her voice sounded good to me. She was the first human being I had spoken to in two months. Rather than continue on her way, she turned about and walked down the tracks with me toward Megantic.

Dinner Stories

"Thanks," said the tragedian, setting down his glass and absent-mindedly pocketing my change, which lay upon the bar between us. "Many thanks for your good opinion. I always study from nature—from nature, sir. In my action you see reflected nature herself."

"Try this cigar," said an admirer of nature, reverently. "Now, where did you study that expression of intense surprise that you assumed in the second act?"

"From nature, sir—from nature. To secure that expression I asked an intimate personal friend to lead me five pounds. He refused. This caused me no surprise. I tried several more. Finally I struck one who was willing to oblige me, and he handed me the money. I studied in the glass the expression of my own face. I saw the surprise, but it was not what I wanted. It was alloyed with suspicion that the sovereign might be had. I was in despair.

"Well," said the other, breathlessly, "Then an idea struck me. I resolved upon a desperate course. I returned the five pounds to my friend the next day, and on his astounded countenance I saw the expression I was in search of. Yes, thank you, a small whisky, as before."

Something Wrong.

From the office window of the Evening Holler, in the gay and brilliant metropolis, the staff funny man scowled with vexation. "Oh, dear, what can the matter be?" he sighed. "I had my gilet set up in 17 different styles and sizes of type today, and still it isn't humorous."

Literature in Turkey has responded to the liberty that followed the revolution. Large numbers of translations and adaptations of European scientific and literary works and books of a popular nature are now available.

A Great Difference.

"There's a difference between poets and widows," sapiently observes the Philadelphia Public Ledger. "Poets are born, but widows are made." A great difference is that a widow is made rich, while a poet is neither born nor made so.

Most Every Girl Flirts.

"I should like to know a girl who is not given to flirtation," remarked Mr. Hutton, the Greenwich magistrate, recently, when a young man stated that he gave up a girl because of her flirting propensities.

This Page Is the City Market Place

Make Your Ad. Definite

"When I came to this town I bought a paper and started to look up a room," said a progressive looking young man to a chance acquaintance the other day.

Advertising always did interest us, so we just naturally tried the don'tey racket with our organs of hearing.

"I found several ads, but benign a stranger in the city" continued the young man, "I did not know who was who, and until I read the very last ad I was at sea as to where to go. The last ad brought forcibly home to me that those who are last shall be first. I answered it at once and it is the one best bet in the way of a nice room."

The last ad was comprehensive. It made mention of the fact that the place was in a good residential section. That said rather a bit to a stranger in town. It is sometimes a thin line that divides failure and success. Even the writing of a want ad is of consequence. Have you an empty room and do you know how to write an ad that will bring you a tenant, or do you simply say: "Room to rent" and then knock the paper if "Company A" (as to numbers) don't answer your ad. FOR SALE—$8,000 mortgage on Rock county farm. High class security. 5 1/2 per cent interest. John L. Fisher, Central Block. 29-8-34.

FOR SALE—We have for sale 6% farm mortgages and farm bonds in denominations of from $250.00 to $5,000.00.

For years we have advertised these as safe investments and have sold a great many of them in Rock county. Every one has proven to be absolutely good.

Many of our customers have dealt with us from 10 to 14 years and are buying more of these securities every year.

We would not be holding these same customers this length of time if the securities we sell are not first class.

If you are making less than 6% on your money look us up.

FORTY YEARS AGO

Janesville Daily Gazette, August 4, 1874.—Last night and this morning the burning apparatus descended fifty feet in fifteen hours, and at that rate of progression, which can easily be sustained unless accidents occur, the depth contracted for will be completed tomorrow, as the descent already exceeds four hundred and fifty feet. Subscribers to the fund are requested to pay over their respective amounts to Mr. C. Miner, so that the committee may keep faith with the contractor. The stratum in which the pump is now working is very fine white sandstone. The work must not be allowed to stop at the point now reached, the indications are too hopeful for such termination.

Alex. Buchholz has fitted up a ship yard on River street near the races on River street, where he makes to order any desired style of boat for car, sail or steam propulsion. A sample sketch which is a model of symmetry and beauty may be seen at the race.

There was a runaway team on Milwaukee street today drawing a lumbering wagon, the property of Mr. Hopkins of Fulton. Patsey Griffin stopped the horses before any damage was done. The team had been left unattended for at the elevator.

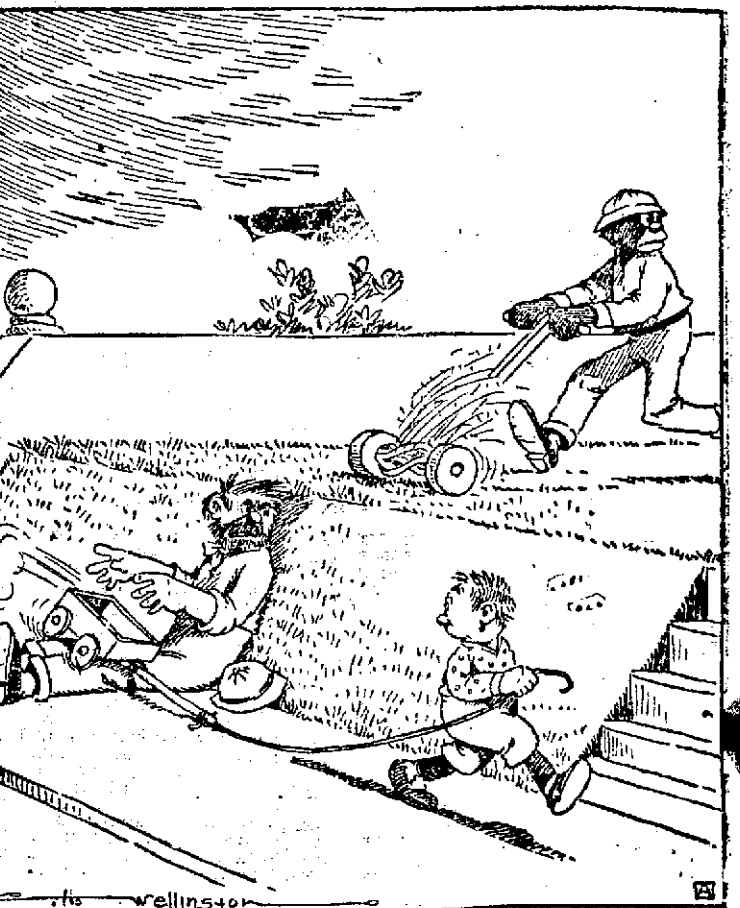

O. Sutherland sustained severe injuries at the baseball practice last night and will be disabled for some time to come.

The military company meeting will probably be convened on Friday evening.

There will be a quail match for $50 a side on the Fair Grounds on Friday, August 14th, between John McArthur of La Prairie and Frank Bell of this city. Distance twenty-one yards.

Patrick Hooney, formerly of Edgerton, has taken the Dearborn House and will carry on the business of that establishment in a manner which will deserve popular support. Mr. Hooney is the applicant for a license and will be dealt with by the common council tomorrow evening.

Earliest Nails Were of Bronze.
Nails of the earlier nations were of bronze. The nail used by Joel in killing Sisera was a wooden tent pin. Up to the nineteenth century nails were mostly forged, the first cut nails being made by Jeremiah Wilson in Rhode Island in 1795.
